DEAN'S SYMPOSIUM

Presented by the Division of Humanities and Social Sciences and the Department of the Library

DIGITAL PLATFORMS

Patricia Brooks, Professor, Department of Psychology
Melissa Borja, Assistant Professor, Department of History
Christine Martorana, Assistant Professor, Department of English

In the fall of 2015, the Division of Humanities and Social Sciences launched a fellowship to enable faculty members with digital expertise to mentor colleagues who wished to embark on their own digitally enabled projects. A year later, the three inaugural fellows will discuss their progress. A Professor of Psychology is working on a feminist Wikipedia initiative in which she and her students are writing and expanding entries devoted to previously overlooked women in the field of psychology. A Professor of History is creating a digitized archive of oral histories representing Staten Island's diverse religious communities. A Professor of English is creating a Web-based resource for faculty members who are teaching multi-modal composition, in which students not only learn the fundamentals of good writing, but also acquire literacy in various digital platforms.

A reception will follow each symposium. CLUE credit is available for all events.
