

Peace in Korea Beyond the Olympics:

A conversation with Korean American experts for US-North Korea diplomacy

(North and South Korean athletes marching under the unification flag at the 2018 PyeongChang Olympics opening ceremony)

The current state of hostilities between the US and North Korea comes with high cost to the people of Korea and the United States. What is the history behind the current crisis? And what is the best path forward for peace?

Hyun Lee, Managing Editor of ZoominKorea will discuss why we need a new policy towards North Korea

Why hasn't North Korea collapsed by now? How is the country able to defy the labyrinth of international and U.S. sanctions to pursue its "Byungjin line," the policy of pursuing parallel progress in nuclear deterrence and economic development?

Kim Soobok of New York Committee for Implementation of the June 15 Joint Declaration will discuss North Korea's recent economic development and the preeminence placed on science and technology in that process.

Location: 1 P-223 College of Staten Island

Time: 2:30 – 4:15 pm on Feb 27, 2017

Who: Students, Faculty, open to the public

If you have any inquiry for this event, please contact Hosu Kim, Associate Professor of Department of Sociology/Anthropology, at hosu.kim@csi.cuny.edu.

Sponsored by:

East Asian Studies Program, The Department of Sociology and Anthropology

CC CLUE CREDIT