AFRICAN/AMERICAN SUBVERSION AND SURVIVAL

Fatoumata Seck

Assistant Professor
Department of World
Languages and Literatures

Maria Bellamy

Associate Professor
Department of English

Continuing and capping the College's celebration of Black History Month, two faculty members discuss their research on African and African American fiction with an emphasis on narratives of subversion and survival. A professor from World Languages and Literatures examines a satirical comic strip from a Senegalese newspaper. A professor from English discusses the Pulitzer-Prize winning novel by Colson Whitehead, The Underground Railroad. Both panelists explore how fictional protagonists question received economic and historical perspectives.

A reception will follow.
CLUE credit is available for this event.
